Überreicht durch das IGR Institut für Gesundheit und Ergonomie

Innovation Award for Ergonomics: The Company Award

We want to create a forum for exemplary companies and bring together all players - suppliers, producers on the one hand and users and buyers on the other. Ergonomics is your competence- make it effectively visible to the outside world!

Christian Brunner
CEO

IGR Institut für Gesundheit und Ergonomie GmbH

Mission: Healthier Work

With the Innovation Award for Ergonomics, the Institut für Gesundheit und Ergonomie pursues the goal:

- Raise awareness of ergonomics in companies.
- promote ergonomic workplace design.
- Provide guidance for the procurement of high-quality ergonomic products and services.
- that manufacturers aim for the highest ergonomic standards in terms of product quality and consulting service.

In this way, the award contains a practical, economic and, at the same time, a social component.

The Jury: Evaluation according to a point system

The jury consists of qualified representatives of the IGR as well as experts cooperating with the institute. Each jury member individually evaluates the applicants according to a predefined point system.

Evaluation criteria are the solution-specific properties of the concepts and measures to be demonstrated:

- health promoting and preventive concepts
- Quality and design as an expression of functionality and durability
- Assessment of concepts for the sustainable promotion of personal or occupational health
- Communicating the topic of ergonomics externally and internally.

Who should apply for the Innovation Award?

- You have the mission to make our working world a little healthier, even more humane, through innovative concepts and outstanding design?
- You live the topics of health and ergonomics in your company and thus have a role model function?
- You thought about what the work of the future will look like?

Can non-nominated companies also apply for the Innovation Award?

All interested companies have the opportunity to apply on their own initiative with ergonomic concepts or fully developed and practicable services.

The jury will then decide whether a nomination will be made.

Who will be nominated? Selection of the nominees

Nominees are companies:

- that place a high value on healthy working and ergonomics.
- that understand ergonomics as part of your corporate culture.
- that already consider the ergonomics and health factor in the development of your products and services.
- that have developed and actively use internal programs and measures to promote occupational health or prevention.

SOLE RUNNER® Barefoot Shoes 2nd time winner of the Innovation Award for Ergonomics

With the 4th awarding of the Ergonomics Innovation Award, one can almost speak of the establishment of a tradition! What pleases us is that the topic of ergonomics is on the rise and is always being rethought. This is also reflected in the many new subject areas that we encountered when reviewing the applications. Which is also a reflection of the upheaval in which we currently find ourselves. Wherever people are, they encounter products and solutions that make life healthier and more sporty, or simply give them pleasure. Successful ergonomic concepts are characterized by ease of use and high utility value. The range of this year's award winners is wide: whether at home in the bathroom, with shoes, comfortable seating furniture or for restful sleep on ergonomic reclining systems, on the road on a bicycle, at school with satchels suitable for children, or on construction machinery in the tough world of work. All award winners were able to position themselves as exemplary companies in terms of their overall ergonomic orientation.
